Craig Schroeder

Energizing Young Entrepreneurs is the first in a series of three webinars on innovative approaches to community economic development. This webinar will feature Craig Schroeder, Senior Fellow for Youth Engagement at the Center for Rural Entrepreneurship in Nebraska. Part of the Center's HomeTown Competitiveness Team, Craig has developed the Center's youth engagement strategy, Saying Yes to Youth!, helping young people discover local career and business opportunities and involving youth in meaningful ways in their community.

The webinar will also feature a special presentation from Jason Smith and Lindsay Vyse of the Fusion Youth Centre in Ingersoll, Ontario. Fusion represents a successful case study of an innovative approach to rural youth programming in entrepreneurial training, business development, civic engagement, and much more.

The webinar begins at 12:00 pm Eastern time, 9:00 am Pacific.

Participation is free.

The Rural Community Economic Development Webinar Series is offered by the Rural Ontario Institute. The series of three webinars will feature thought-leaders who have practical experience with an innovative economic development approach at the community or regional level.

The series will enable community economic development practitioners across the province, regardless of geographical location, to access barrier-free information on exciting, new and potentially under-utilized approaches to CED from leaders in the field.
